World's Fair Police Station.

"The rumor that there is a clash between the World's Fair people and the city in regard to the location of a police station for use during the Fair is false," said Inspector Hunt of the Hyde Park Police Station yesterday. "The managers of the Exposition want ample protection for visitors at that time and offered to build a police station and engine house if the city would furnish men necessary to run them.

"There will be a patrol of 100 men or more if needed, with headquarters at a new station, which will be erected at Sixty-third street and Woodlawn avenue. It will not be a temporary affair, as many suppose, but will be a well-built and neatly-appointed station, and will be for permanent use after the World's Fair.

"It is not yet known who will have charge of the station, but it is supposed one of the men at the Hyde Park Station will be placed in charge."
