

MRS. GUINAN, 54, POLICE MATRON, DIES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Mayme Guinan, 54 years old, once known as the most beautiful police matron in America, collapsed and died yesterday afternoon in the women's annex of the police station at 11th and State streets. She had been a matron for more than sixteen years. Death is believed to have been from acute indigestion.

MAYME GUINAN.

Mrs. Guinan had just reported for work. A few minutes before, while talking with two policemen on a street car, she had confided that she intended to move from her home at 1309 Dakin street this fall, because the sufferings of an invalid landlord made her despondent.

She complained of feeling unwell as she stood talking with two other matrons who were going off duty. After saying that she would "be all right in a moment," she collapsed.

Although she had been a widow for 28 years, friends of Mrs. Guinan often told her that except for her white hair she could "pass for a girl of 23." A brother, William Dugan, is a policeman in the Central station and another brother, Michael Dugan, is a retired sergeant. She is also survived by two daughters, Miss Rose Guinan and Mrs. Lillian Galvin, and two grandchildren.
